Do existing battery rooms have ventilation vulnerabilities?

A case study involving six existing battery rooms has been performed to investigate design vulnerabilities and identify knowledge gaps with respect to ventilation and other active fire protection measures. Results from the mapping indicate large differences in the design of ventilation systems and strategies implemented in existing battery rooms.

Do li-ion battery rooms comply with international standards for gas venting?

A case study investigating ventilation solutions and strategies for gas extraction in Li-ion battery rooms in six buildings has been conducted. The findings reveal significant variability in the choice made for gas venting and explosion prevention. None of the case buildings complied fully with established international guidelines.

Do case buildings need ventilation in a battery room?

The fire safety design concepts for the case buildings give few requirements for ventilation of the battery room. Hence, the factors that underlie the design of the ventilation solutions and strategies in the battery rooms remain unclear. It is therefore difficult to identify a common or best practice based on the survey of these case buildings.

Should ventilation rates be set based on battery storage capacity?

The ventilation rates should be set based on the BESS's storage capacity and the room size. This study explores ventilation system design practices for LIB BESS installations in Norway. It maps the design and fire safety measures of six battery storage rooms in the country.
