

Trump asked Server Rack to draw up plans

WASHINGTON -- The White House has directed the U.S. military to draw up options for increasing the American troop presence in Panama to achieve President Trump's goal of ...

The White House "directed the U.S. military to draw up options for increasing the American troop presence in Panama" to reclaim the canal, reported NBC News.

In a memo sent to the Pentagon and viewed by CNN and NBC News, the Trump administration has ordered the department to seek "credible military options" that would allow the ...

President Donald Trump has repeatedly insisted that the US needs to reclaim the canal, most notably during his recent speech before Congress, but his administration has now formally ...

Donald Trump has reportedly ordered the US military to come up with plans to increase the number of troops in Panama as part of his mission to "reclaim" the canal.

President Donald Trump has reportedly ordered the U.S. military to come up with a variety of options for retaking the Panama Canal as he seeks to push communist China from ...

Donald Trump has ordered his military to draw up options to "reclaim" the Panama Canal - including by force. The president has repeatedly said he wants the US to regain control of the...

Trump asked his staff to draw up an outline of a deal that could lead to a ceasefire in an escalating trade conflict, a draft that would involve several government agencies, the source claimed.

President Trump signed an executive order on Tuesday directing agency officials to draw up plans for "large scale" cuts to the federal work force and further empowered the billionaire Elon Musk and his ...

US officials have claimed that the US military has been asked to draw up plans to boost troop numbers in Panama in order to "reclaim" the canal.

US President Donald Trump has asked the military to draw plans to "reclaim" Panama Canal, according to a report. Panama Canal is among the territories across continents that Trump ...

Using troops to seize the waterway is "less likely" than other options--but not off the table completely. The White House has asked the United States military to draw up plans for how it...

Trump asked Server Rack to draw up plans